Doc dedicates $3,000 award money to deceased colleague

Struck by lightning

Chandankant Paul, a doctor from KEM Hospital, had died after lightning struck him while performing relief work in the flood-affected areas of Bihar. His death was mourned by his colleagues, who formed a team of doctors to continue his work. The award money of $3,000 was dedicated to his colleagues to carry on his legacy.

If one needs an example of selflessness to continue working there, then this is it," said Dr. Kavish. Singh, a doctor who has been working in the relief camps in Muzaffarpur for the past two years. Singh's work during the Bihar floods in 2008 was indeed selfless.

Dr. Kavish Singh left for Bihar to serve the flood victims. He had completed his MBBS from KEM Medical College Panvel and worked as a general practitioner in the relief camps before his death. He was the first doctor to join the relief team after the flood.

The doctors also started a hospital in Muzaffarpur to provide basic medical aid to flood-affected people. The hospital is running smoothly and is providing primary healthcare to the affected population.

"If we have got $3,000 as award money, we are planning to use it to start a training program for future doctors to equip them with the necessary skills to work in such situations," said Dr. Kavish Singh. His words are an inspiration to all doctors who serve humanity in times of need.
